DETAILED ACTION

1. In view of the interview between applicant's representative, and in view of the arguments presented 9/23/2005, the office action mailed 6/14/2007 is vacated, and prosecution on the merits is reopened.

Allowable Subject Matter

2. Claims 1-30 are allowed over the prior art of record.
3. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

As per the independent claims, the claim recitations pertaining to recognize an audio signal corresponding to one of a subset of commands from a set of commands wherein the commands corresponding to a task to be performed on the implanted medical device, the speech recognition circuit further adapted to convert the audio signal into a selection code and match the selection code wherein the implanted medical device and automatically select the subset of commands as a function of the device state, and a medical data processing instrument coupled to the processor arrangement and adapted to, in response to the control signal, execute the one of the subset of commands and to display data generated in response to execution of the one of the subset of commands, is not explicitly taught by the prior art of record.

With respect to the prior art of record, speech controlled implantable medical devices, along with interrogation techniques with an implantable medical device and data capturing computer equipment, are notoriously old and well known in the art. For example, Snell (U.S. Patent 5,792,204, issued August 11, 1998) teaches a system interfacing with an implanted medical device (col. 3, lines 61-65), with microphone input of a voice command to a speech recognizer (col. 3, lines 5-7); the speech recognizer matching the input voice command to the subset of commands and converting the recognized voice command into a selection code (control program instructions, col. 4, line 5), said commands along with a set of control signals being stored in memory (col. 5, line 67 thru col. 6, line 2; col. 4, lines 5-6), and generating a control signal therefrom to execute the commands (col. 3, lines 9-13; col. 5, lines 4-6); a display device (col. 4, line 62); and displaying received data generated by the implanted medical device in response to the execution of the command as well as implanted medical device state data (col. 4, lines 62-65 and col. 5, lines 3-13), and interfacing with an implanted medical device (col. 3, lines 61-65), with a microphone input of a voice command to a speech recognizer (col. 3, lines 5-7); control program instructions, col. 4, line 5. In the art of speech recognition and commands, it is old and notoriously well known to generate subcommand lists pertaining to particular subjects. For example, Rozak et al (5761641) teaches context-sensitive commands, and to display them for user selection by voice (or, of course, by keyboard or mouse) from a displayed menu (Rozak et al (5761641), Fig. 9, col. 3 line 55 – col. 4 line 19 -- commands are created that are context specific and application specific). The only commonality to the Snell and Rozak reference is the storage/usage of voice commands. However, it would not have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify either reference to obtain the recited claim limitations of the independent claims as noted above.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
